DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 21-28, 30-32 and 34-37 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being clearly anticipated by Crawford (US 5,754,176).

Regarding claims 21-26 and 30, Crawford teaches assigning a first activation sequences to a first user interface (icon) and assigning a second activation sequences to a second user interface (icon) that is close proximity to the first user interface, the first activation sequence being different from the second activation sequence, wherein the icons are on window displayed on a computer screen (see col. 5 lines 28-48, col. 6 lines 3-55).

Regarding claims 27 and 28, Crawford teaches a first and second user interface, the first interface when activated removes the window and the second user interface when activated displays another window; wherein the first and second interface are activated differently (see col. 5, lines 28-48 and fig. 4).

Regarding claim 31, Crawford teaches two icons on a window displayed on a computer screen (see fig. 3 & 4).

Regarding claim 32, Crawford teaches a source identifying the source of a window (see fig. 1); a first icon when activated removes a window and a second icon when activated displays another window on the screen, wherein the first icon and second icon are activated differently (see col. 5 lines 28-48 and fig. 4).

Regarding claims 34-37, Crawford teaches a first icon when activating removes a window and a second icon provide an option to view a message (see fig. 3 and 4); the icons displayed adjacent to each other, the two icons activated differently (see col. 5 lines 28-48). The type of message displayed is nonfunctional descriptive material which does not have patentable weight. The content of the displayed matter will not distinguish the claimed product from the prior art.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 29 and 33 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Crawford as applied to claim 27 above, and further in view of Martinez (US 5546521).

Regarding claims 29 and 33, Crawford does not explicitly disclose wherein the first user interface is activated by one click and the second interface with two clicks. Martinez teaches clicking to minimize a window and double clicking to close a dialog box (see fig. 9). Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of the ordinary skill in the art at the time of applicant's invention is made to implement, in Crawford's window, one icon to be activated with one click and a second icon with double click, as taught in Martinez. One would be motivated to select a single click or a double click to select and close a window or to select and open a window, as in Martinez.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Darby et al. (US 2003/0126597) teaches displaying source of message window.
